The video has been posted on Facebook, My Space and several other social networking sites. In addition, several local theater groups have posted the video and story on their blogs.

There's also a web site, www.inthelandoffireworks.com, with directions on how to audition, character scripts, and other information. The web site has seen thousands of hits since the video has been released.

Curry, a 3-time Emmy Award winner for his television work, is using his own money to fund the movie, but would welcome any investors as well. Curry intends to show the movie at film festivals around the country in the hopes that a Hollywood studio will pick up the movie for distribution, much like what happened in the case of the movie Garden State a few years ago.

The Rave Motion Picture chain has agreed to showcase the movie in one of its theaters when released.

A man in a blue t-shirt and cap is shown in profile, looking up at a night sky filled with colorful fireworks. The fireworks are in various colors, including blue, white, and red. In the background, the silhouettes of a crowd of people are visible, also looking up at the sky. The overall scene is dark, with the bright light of the fireworks providing the main illumination.
